Bangles, Bling and Brigantes

A talk by Dr Roger Martlew

Craven Arts House, Skipton at 7.30pm

New discoveries are bringing fresh insights into what was happening in northern England some two thousand years ago. Ongoing specialist analysis is highlighting the national and international significance of important finds like the Melsonby hoard. How does this, and the analysis of local evidence, add to our understanding of life in the Craven Dales through the Roman conquest and occupation of the North?
